and the Docudays UA team
Docudays UA International Documentary Film Festival is the biggest venue in Ukraine, which for twelve years has annually presented to viewers the most powerful masterpieces of creative documentary from around the world. Incredible queues in front of film theaters during the festival week prove the huge popularity of auteur’s documentaries, first of all among Ukrainian youth. We know that such popularity of documentary films in Ukraine was formed thanks to the work of a great Docudays UA team.

But for us, it is no less important that in recent years Ukrainian documentaries have started to appear more often on screens of leading film festivals around the world. Co-production with a number of European countries is being considered as a regular occurrence as well.

This catalog presents the films which were created in Ukraine in 2013–2015. Among these there are award winning films, recognized at such prestigious forums as Hot Docs, DOK Leipzig, Jihlava IDFF, and many more, as well as pictures that are only about to start their festival biography. Also, this edition has gathered film projects on different stages of production. In case you’re planning to film in Ukraine, you will also find the contacts for various institutions and professionals to make your work more effective.

We hope this edition will help festival programmers and distributors to open the modern Ukrainian documentaries to a worldwide viewership, as much as it will help the industry professionals to find some unbelievable stories, incredible protagonists, and most importantly, great film directors and reliable partners for your future films.

Greetings
Pylyp Illienko
head of Ukrainian State Film Agency
It is a great honor to present the catalog of Ukrainian documentary films, because Ukraine has not only an impressive legacy of documentaries from the 1920s onwards, but some significant modern achievements as well.

The turbulent events of the past two years in Ukraine has brought our documentary films to a new level – a person with a camera was always in the midst of those events, transmitting the emotional state of those involved through the artistic tools of cinema language. It can be said, without exaggeration, that during this time the Ukrainian documentaries have served an incredibly important social duty, by forming civil society and helping the Ukrainians with their cultural identification.

I hope this catalog will open up the world of Ukrainian documentary films to you, and will help to establish the cooperation between Ukrainian and foreign filmmakers. This is crucially important for Ukraine, at the moment when our country has chosen to integrate with the European Union.
Balazher. The Corrections of Reality

Social systems come and go, but people remain. Since Soviet times, an old Ukrainian bus has been running along the outermost EU border. At the critical juncture of this geo-political construct, this old bus appears as fragile as the past itself. Will the bus come, or not? Passengers wait patiently at the bus stop: and they dream that the bus will take them – perhaps to a better future.

Lesia Kordonets was born in Ukraine in 1983. She grew up in the times of social turmoil in her homeland, before moving to Germany to enroll in the Theodor-Heuss College of Education (promoting democratic responsibility and civil engagement among young people in Eastern Europe). After her graduation in German studies, she has written and directed various short films and documentaries in Ukraine, Germany, and Switzerland. In 2014 she started a master’s degree at the department of cinema of Zurich Art Institute.

We remember dates and facts, while losing tiny details – like a bouquet of summer wildflowers, tears from onions, and winter cold on a bus stop bench. We remember the birthdays of our beloved and how they like their tea, but we forget unexpected touches, floating glances, casual chats. And sometimes – when we are rapidly torn apart from each other – we engrave such moments into our memory.

Kateryna Gornostai was born in 1989 in Lutsk, Ukraine. She received her bachelor degree in natural sciences specializing in biology, and a master’s degree in journalism from the Kyiv-Mohyla Academy National University. She graduated from the Moscow School of Documentary Cinema and Theater under Marina Razbezhkina and Mikhail Ugarov, and after that she returned to Kyiv. She is currently involved in educational programs on documentaries, and creates documentary and fiction projects.

Café Voyage

Ukraine/ 2014/ 12’

Vova is a guard at a private fishing enterprise. In the Soviet days and the early 1990s he was the head of a collective fishing farm. Nowadays, he’s at the roadside of life, watching things go by from his vantage point – the abandoned Voyage café. His tales and stories make up a kaleidoscopic image of present-day Ukraine.

Roman Bondarchuk is a graduate of the Karpenko-Kary Theater, Film, and Television University (Yuriy Illienko’s workshop). His graduation film Taxi Driver won the White Elephant prize from the Russian Film Critic Guild and the Russian Producers’ Grand Prix at the Kinoshok Open film festival for the CIS, Latvia, Lithuania, and Estonia, as well as the prize for Boldness and Poetics at the 4th KINOTEATR.DOC festival.

He and She come to the Ukrainian small village hidden in the mountains, settle in a house and aimlessly roam the countryside. The guy tries to tell the girl about these places, and every day she understands his delight more and more. It is their holiday, their escape into nature aiming to understand themselves.

Marina Stepanska graduated from the Karpenko-Kary Kyiv National University of Film and TV in 2014. Later she worked at the School experimental theatre, learning the method of fitting non-actors to the scene and frame. She directed the open-air spectacle Artis Is Silent, Alice Is Silent by Anseis Kaugers with non-actors. She studied storytelling on Robert McKee’s Story Seminar and got training from Valdis Oskarsdottir.

Myasokombinat / Meat Factory
Ukraine/ 2013/ 32'

A look from the inside at how parliamentary elections are organized and held, this documentary shows its viewer the mix of the extremity and boredom of the process. Meat Factory is an attempt to understand who defines our future and how they do it; an attempt to tell the story of unity and splits among people, the humor born out of sleepless nights.

Piotr Armianovsky is an artist, performer, and director. He was born in Donetsk in 1985. He completed higher education in natural sciences. He participates actively in social and political life, and won an Acknowledgment from the Central Election Committee. Meat Factory is his first documentary.

Sirs and Misters

A museum guide, a military man, a bank clerk, an aircraft mechanic and other desperate Ukrainian men from all over the country get together every fall to work as porters during the pilgrimage of Hasidim to the town of Uman. Within four days, tens of thousands of Hasidim flock together to this tiny town – in a celebrating mood, singing, dancing, and... bringing enormous amounts of baggage with them. It seems that no burdens can suppress their optimism and humor. Finally, they are sure: “The Lord God knows what He’s doing.”

Oleksandr Techynsky was born in 1979 in Dnipropetrovsk. He spent his childhood in the Sakha Republic, Yakutia. In 1999, he graduated from Dnipropetrovsk Medical College, then worked as a medical assistant in a psychiatric emergency team. In 2001, he left medicine and started to work as a freelance photographer. In 2005 he started working at the Kommersant-Ukraine daily newspaper. In 2010 he left Kommersant and focused on his own documentary projects, including photography and film.

Lena, Taya and Tamara live in Kyiv and work at local cinema studios. They got used to editing other people’s movies by working with positive film strips only, and they are afraid of computers. Their world is a world of lost and dusty tapes on the floors. They breed cats, watch the Oscar ceremonies every year and secretly dream of working on movies like Avatar. All their lives they have remained on the backstage of the cinema world, on the other side of the screen. And now it’s their time to come onto the stage...

Polina Kelm was born in 1979 in Kyiv; she graduated from the Kyiv National Karpenko-Kary Theatre, Film, and TV University as a film director in 2010. She also works as a screenplay writer and editor. Her films have been submitted to over ten international festivals since 2005.

if we put all of Mykola Amosov’s patients together, we would get the population of a small town. And if we count all the people saved by his students and the Amosov Institute – how many would there be? A region? A country? A dozen prominent medical scientists would envy his achievements, but he didn’t limited himself to medicine. A doctor, an engineer, a cyberneticist, a writer, a public activist, a scientist, a man of thought – he was a multifaceted and complex personality. We call such people renaissance men. His intellect, health, and creativity were in complete balance and harmony. He was notable for his unique ability to make a great qualitative advancement in everything he touched. What was his secret? What was that inherent force that drove this brilliant man?

Tabir (Loli Kali Shuba) / Loli Kali Shuba

Ukraine/ 2013/ 52'

The film Loli Kali Shuba is a cinematic essay on the topic of a voyage taken “twenty years later” to “old” places in the hope of meeting some of the characters from another film, made twenty years ago. Loli Kali Shuba is the name that Carpathian Roma children use for a ladybug... Like all children, like us in childhood, they put a ladybug in their open palms and sing a little song: “Ladybug, fly, fly away to the sky...” And the insect spreads its wings and flies away... Flies, of course, to “the sky.” Meanwhile, children grow up and become “adults”.

Aleksandr Balahura was born in 1961 in Lyuboml, Volyn Oblast, Ukraine. In 1981 he was admitted to the Department of History at Taras Shevchenko University in Kyiv and graduated from it in 1987. “Not a single clever thought occurred to me while I was ducking my head behind the operator’s camera. I felt my body becoming numb, I was feeling hunger, and above all else in the world I was craving for care, tenderness, closeness...”

Maryna Vroda was born in 1982 in Kyiv. She graduated from the Cinematography and TV faculty at the Karpenko-Karyy National University of Theatre, Film, and TV in Kyiv, with a specialization in feature films direction. She attended workshops run by Mykhaylo Illienko and Valery Sivak. After graduation, she worked with Sergei Loznitsa. Her short student films have been shown at international film festivals in both Eastern and Western Europe, and in 2011 she won a Palme d’Or for Best Short Film at the Cannes Film Festival for Cross.

The authors of this film spend several weeks observing four people on the eve of the presidential elections in Ukraine. All four of them are from different regions of Ukraine – Donetsk, Crimea, Irpin and Kyiv. What they have in common are the wounds they received during the protest actions in Ukraine. Maidan is losing its relevance, and the four characters in the film are trying to deal with their personal problems and take an active part in the country’s civic life.

Khvirisukaliudy / Sickfuckpeople

Ukraine, Austria/ 2013/ 73’

A documentary triptych about a group of hobos who, having survived drug addiction, have now grown up and started living adult lives. It's a story about a boy who is facing the surreal, degenerate society of his native village, full of hatred and sadistic anger, while searching for his mother. It's a story about a pregnant girl who wants to give birth to a child whose childhood will probably be even worse than the mother's – but she is forced by her own sisters to have an abortion.

This film is not about the revolution that changed Ukraine this winter. Not exactly. Rather, it shows a universal pattern of particular kind of uprisings – those ones that end with bloodshed. At first, the noble endeavor for freedom collides with the dark force of repressive rulers. Eventually, after much confusion and chaos, the righteous anger of people changes to pure outrage. When the first casualties on both sides fall, no matter how black and white it may seem from outside, the edge between good and bad blurs when one looks from the epicenter of a battle. Finally, all things ablaze.

Oleksandr Techynskyi, Oleksiy Solodunov and Dmitry Stoykov are lifelong friends and colleagues who have worked as photo reporters for many years. When they switched to filmmaking in order to tell a bigger story, their photojournalistic approach became something that defines their cinematographic style. All Things Ablaze is their first feature length documentary. Oleksandr has also directed a short documentary Sirs and Misters, together with Oleksiy as DP.

Three months of revolution. From indignant protest to national unity. From pots on their heads to batons and body armour. From the euphoria of victory to the mourning of the fallen Heavenly Hundred. Revolution as an explosion of revived dignity, as the euphoria of freedom, as the pain of awareness at the cost, as the birth of the modern history of Ukraine. Experience the three months of struggle with us, feel and see the revolution through our eyes.

This film was created specially for the opening of the 2014 Docudays UA International Documentary Film Festival, Kyiv, Ukraine. Since the festival took place just a month after the tragic end of the recent Ukrainian revolution, all attention of the festival team was focused on the changes taking place in Ukraine. However, as just a very short time has passed since the latest events, there has not been time to complete a film. So the festival’s team asked the directors filming the Ukrainian protest to share their best shots with us – in a rough cut, just as they were. This is how the idea of Euromaidan. Rough Cut appeared.

When her career as a footballer ended, leaving the medals and victories in the past, Zo had to face a whole new match, this time against despair, poverty and a family torn apart by alcohol. Together with Zo, we tackle the challenges life throws at her as she struggles and dreams for a better life despite the hopelessness. She is heading to play in her final football match, which will remind her of past glories and help her believe in herself again.

Alisa Kovalenko was born in 1987 in Zaporizhia, Ukraine. She has studied journalism at the Shevchenko Kyiv State University, and later cinema documentary direction under the supervision of Oleksandr Koval at the Karpenko-Kary National University of Theatre, Film, and Television in Kyiv.

Filmography (selection): Tak to właśnie jest (2012), Olehowska Nostalgia (2011)
The film follows three men of different generations living in the Ukrainian Carpathians: Ivan is an 82-year-old retired shepherd who lives a lonely life, having recently buried his wife. At the same time, ten-year-old Ivanko is just beginning his life and studying at the county boarding school, while 39-year-old Vasyl is raising young lambs on his farm. But when spring comes, all three men will head for the mountains, following the shepherd’s calling that is becoming ever more difficult to sustain in the contemporary world.

The focus of the film is the unique phenomenon of Ukrainian self-identity. How do people identify themselves? Who are they? Those who protested on Maidan are telling us about being inside the dramatic events of the Ukrainian revolution.

The film is based on the Okean Elzy band’s anniversary tour in Ukraine in 2014. We captured fans’ deepest emotions and the musicians’ immense talent; backstage, rehearsals, and sound checks are all incorporated into the film. The documentary also features unique archival footage and interviews with the members, and explores the evolution of the band from their creation to the heights of popularity they enjoy today.

Rebbe Nachman, the holy leader of the Breslov Hasidim movement, was born four years after 1768, the year that a large peasant rebellion led by the Cossacks Gonta and Zalizniak, slaughtered 20,000 Uman residents – both Jews and Poles. Today, every year, thousands of Hasidim from 70 countries visit Rebbe Nachman’s grave in Uman, Ukraine. The crowds of Hasidim support a large part of the city’s economy, but not everybody in the city is happy with that. Ukrainian nationalists agitate against the foreigners and accuse the local authorities of selling out to Hasidim. A large Christian cross is erected by the lake, where the largest group of Hasidim come to pray every year.

The film is a story of creating a new Ukrainian Army. The insurgent nation overthrew the criminal government and drove out the vassals of the Russian Empire. The enraged colonizer sent its troops to Ukraine and captured some of the territories. The President of Ukraine signed a ceasefire agreement and defined a demarcation line between the armies. According to the agreement, the Donetsk International Airport appeared behind the line. Yet, the volunteering patriots did not want to let the enemies take it. The heroic defense lasted 242 days, but after the aimed tank shelling, the airport building collapsed. The people withstood, the construction did not.

Vagrich and the Black Square

Vagrich Bahchanyan was the author of thousands of images, collages, dozens of notebooks, hundreds of book and magazine covers, more than a hundred tomes of ‘telephone illustrations’, absurdist plays and numerous aphorisms, such as “We were born to make Kafka come true”. The absurd and surrealistic world of Bahchanyan fills the screen of the film – pictures, animations, performances, theater. This world contains his mystery – and the mystery of the ‘Black Square’ as well.

How far are we willing to go in the name of the homeland? My grandma Maria in 1945 crossed half of Europe pushing the stroller with her sister Polina, who was born at some farm near Berlin in a family of Ukrainian ostarbeiters. 70 years later Polina and Maria are repeating this journey backwards to find the place of Polina’s birth. Will they regret returning to Peremoha (‘Victory’) village?

Over a year has passed since the tragic events on Instytutská St in Kyiv on February 20, 2014. On that day, special-forces units opened fire against the protesters; unleashing their destruction they killed over 50 people, and wounded over 200. To date, not a single case has been brought to the court... A lawyer is searching for witnesses concerning the death of her client. A son uncovers the circumstances of his father’s death. A father, distrusting the prosecutor’s office, organizes his own independent investigation of the murder of his son...

Born to live in the middle of nowhere at the outer European border between the Danube river and the Black Sea, inhabitants of the delta earn their daily bread by cutting the reed in winter – the reed meant to cover roofs somewhere in Europe – while each of them dreams of a lucky chance to catch a legendary but very rare beluga fish, which could immediately bring a fortune with its precious black caviar. Every day they struggle to survive, working hard during severe colds, but the nonfreezing water landscapes of the delta makes them fluid as well, letting people melt the ice of their lives with hopes, humor, and simple dignity.

Oleksandr Techynsky was born in 1979 in Dnipropetrovsk. He spent childhood in the Sakha Republic, Yakutia. In 1999 he graduated from Dnipropetrovsk Medical College, then he worked as a medical assistant in a psychiatric emergency team. In 2001 he left medicine and started to work as a freelance photographer. Since 2005 has worked at the Kommersant-Ukraine daily newspaper. In 2010 he left Kommersant and focused on his own documentary projects, including photography and film.

Little kids, big dreams, and smashingly good music: Dixieland follows the amazing progress of members of a Ukrainian children’s brass band from Kherson. Through steady practice under the wildest of conditions, Roman (12, trumpet), Polina (10, trombone, drums & many others), Leva (22, saxophone) produce magical music with ancient instruments. Not least, thanks to their wit and good humor, they persevere together – helped by their beloved teacher Semyon Ryvkin. These children of the post-Soviet provinces use American tunes to achieve their dream: to become someone in the world, and make something of their lives no matter how dire the circumstances are.

Roman Bondarchuk is a graduate of the Karpenko-Kary Theater, Film, and Television University (Yuriy Illienko’s workshop). His graduation film Taxi Driver won the White Elephant prize from the Russian Film Critic Guild and the Russian Producers’ Grand Prix at the Kinoshok Open film festival for the CIS, Latvia, Lithuania, and Estonia, as well as the prize for Boldness and Poetics at the 4th KINOTEATR.DOC festival.

The Independence Square in Kyiv is a model of space with dense urban and social transformations. It changed its name eight times, became a place for large-scale radical protests in 1989, 2001, 2004 and 2014, and has been rebuilt more than four times. During construction works, archeological excavations were undertaken there in 1981 and 2001. Expedition is about these several cases. Following archaeologists, the viewer looks for the trace evidences of the time that was spent by humans collectively, long ago and recently.

Maria Stoianova was born in 1986 in Ukraine. She graduated from National University of Kyiv-Mohyla Academy (Kyiv) with MA in Culture Studies and from Central European University (Budapest) with MA in Social Science and Social Anthropology. As a part of an academic research she co-directed her first short documentary. In 2013 her co-project of a short film about LGBT Christianity in Ukraine was selected for the INDIE LAB Documentary Workshop for Young filmmakers. In 2014 worked as a 2nd Assistant Director at the shooting of Ugly by Juri Rechinsky (Ukraine, Austria). She has also worked at various international film festivals in Ukraine.

Grigory is 89. He has always lived in a lonely village nestled deep in the Ukrainian mountains. On a 16mm camera, he keeps on filming his neighbors who don’t remember their real past. By shooting, developing, and editing his films for almost half a century, Grigory aims to capture time on celluloid. He has neither followers, nor admirers. Our incidental meeting in the village turned into making a new movie together...

Marina Stepanska graduated from the Karpenko-Kary Kyiv National University of Film and TV in 2014. Later she worked at the School experimental theatre, learning the method of fitting non-actors to the scene and frame. She directed the open-air spectacle Artis Is Silent, Alice Is Silent by Anself Kaugers with non-actors. She studied storytelling on Robert McKee’s Story Seminar and got training from Valdis Oskarsdottir.

In Isolation is a film about a choice of life path. The film is about contemporary music culture in Ukraine. It is about musicians who want to play noncommercial music, and about all the difficulties they have to face every day. All of the musicians in the project are representing different and even opposing styles – they play absolutely diverse music. At first sight it seems that the characters do not have much in common, but it turns out that they have a lot to unite them. For example, they all are working on music projects, that are largely more known abroad, than in Ukraine. And why is that so?

Sergei Volkov is a film director. He graduated summa cum laude from the Institute of Film and TV of the Kyiv National University of Culture and Arts, department of Cinematography (Eduard Timlin’s workshop). Post-graduated in film directing and screenwriting at Karpenko-Kary National University of Theatre, Film, and TV as an assistant to Ukrainian film-maker Oleksandr Koval.

These years, the forefront of the global opposition between state machine, corporations, and communities is in Ukraine. Symbols of Maidan revolution – Molotov cocktails and burning tires – were already manifested in 2010 in a small village near Odessa. Community voice was not heard and peaceful form of protest against the mighty state energy project inevitably turned into violent clashes. Live Power is a 4-year story of the fight of the village of Usatovo residents against two transmission lines financed by EBRD to be built over their village. This story has got the happy ending.

Dmytro Tiazhlov graduated from the Kyiv State Institute of Theatrical Art and TV. Tiazhlov's aesthetic falls squarely in the "direct cinema" tradition of documentary filmmaking, which emphasizes continued filming, as unobtrusively as possible, of human conversation and the routines of everyday life, with no music, no voice-over narration, and no overt attempt to interpret or explain the events unfolding before the camera. Dmytro is the Curator of the DOP course, at Kyiv State University of Film and TV.

Mariupol

Ukraine/ est. release 2015/ 80'

The film is about the spirit of the Ukrainian people, how to live during the war, why people started to defend their country, and the terrible tragedy that has ruined many families and destroyed many lives. By describing the experience of Mariupol town, which is located in Eastern Ukraine, the creators are showing the terrible war in Ukraine. The film is based on shelling of the Skhiny residential quarter, which occurred on January 24, 2015. Shelling was caused by multiple launch of the Grad rocket systems from the territory occupied by the pro-Russian militants. The film consists of several stories: personal stories of victims, and the leading storyline about soldiers of Azov regiment.

February 21, 2014 marked a new chapter in the history of Ukraine. The project explores the state of a country in transition, through a century old institution that appears to be the least susceptible to changes: National Art Museum of Ukraine. The daily life and routines of tour guides, security guards, curators, restorers, visitors, and the artworks shape the story line of the feature documentary. Long hidden from public view, the Ukrainian avant-garde moves into the exhibition halls, stories of killed and exiled artists come to the forefront of the national psyche, and paintings that once were the pride of Socialist realism move into obscurity. The seemingly isolated and quiet universe of the museum reveals countless connections to the bigger picture – the war torn, struggling country.

Award-winning transnational filmmaker Andrei Zagdansky was born and raised in Kyiv, Ukraine. He graduated from the filmmaking department of the Kyiv Theater Institute. He worked at the Kyivnaukfilm Studio, and was a director at independent film studio Thursday. Since 1992, he has lived and worked in the USA.

Olha’s Italian Diary
Italy/ est. release 2017/ 50’

Olha is a woman who always keeps going ahead. That is, according to her own account anyways. Her life is packed with enough turning points to fill up a few telenovelas, and yet, it is so similar to the lives of many women of such background – the Ukrainian female labor migrants in Italy. “Moving ahead” is not always easy, as it means to face Italian stereotypes about husband-hunting Eastern European women, Ukrainian public accusations of leaving in search of a better life, her own guilt for bringing her son to the city where he found his death and the need to be an example for her 18 year old daughter. The film is full of women talking about men and their absence from migrant women’s lives.

Olena Fedyuk was born and grew up in Ukraine but in the last 15 years she has been moving around Europe pursuing her professional interest: research in gendered migration flows, migrant labor, and moral economy of migration. She holds a PhD in Social Anthropology and currently works as a researcher in Glasgow. Since 2012, she has turned to film as a media for both research and outreach, and a way to grasp humor and contradictions of migration stories. Both of the films are not about migration per se but about people who have embarked on complicated journeys, both emotionally and geographically.

This film is an attempt to look into an investigation – the case of the filmmaker Oleg Sentsov, arrested by the Russian security service at his home, in the Russia-occupied Crimea, for his pro-Ukrainian sentiments. As the inquiry into this strange political trial unfolds, the film turns into an absurd and frightening Kafkaesque story about the confrontation between a person and the colossal state machine, the wheels of which seems to have caught him by accident.

Born in Uzbekistan, Askold Kurov has been living in Russia since 1991. He majored in Philology, Theatrical and Theological Studies. Before studying documentary filmmaking, he worked for 8 years as a package designer. His films Leninland and Children 404 received a wide critical and festival acclaim as a thoughtful look into human rights problems and social issues in contemporary Russia.

Roma
Ukraine/ est. release 2020/ 60’

The film tells the uneasy yet fascinating story of a Gypsy teen Roma since he was 13. We get to know him in the heart of the Ukrainian Revolution of Dignity at Maidan. In a difficult revolutionary environment, being exposed to daily dangers, seeing how explosions and bullets kill Ukrainians who rebelled against the bloodthirsty regime, Roma experiences the intensity of revolution in its entirety. Our next meeting with Roma takes place one year later. After a period of wandering and distress in the streets, he is in the children rehabilitation center, in the atmosphere of love and care. The goal of the next shooting is to watch Roma’s destiny unwind. We shall be patient observers of his fate writing the script until his adulthood.

They have been together for 12 years under the roof of Dakh, one of the most interesting theaters in Kyiv; its title means ‘roof’ in Ukrainian. Under the leadership of an extremely talented director and wise “father” Vladyslav Troitsky, Dakh Theatre has long been known across Europe. 7 actresses of the theater created a music and theater project – an intellectual cabaret Dakh Daughters Band. Ukrainian winter 2013 made us take a stand on our civic position. From the first day at Maidan, girls participated both as musicians-enlighteners and as simple helpmates on a revolutionary kitchen. The camera has been following the band for two years...

Iryna Stetsenko is a sound producer. She has been working on documentary projects about musicians as a sound engineer. Since 2012, she and the cinematographer Serhiy Stetsenko have been shooting material of their musician friends in one of the private clubs in Kyiv. Since 2013, Iryna has been working with the theater and music project Dakh Daughters Band as a sound producer and a director of their music videos. The short documentary focuses on the participation of musicians in the Revolution of Dignity, and resulted in an almost two-year profound documentary observation over actresses from Dakh Daughters Band.

The basis for this map based interactive documentary are films from Ukrainian filmmakers. The films are situated in their location of origin, and create new narrative threads of meaning from the stories that emerge. The user-directed interface emphasizes the auto-ethnographic nature of the films, and the lack of a fixed narrative thread allows the films to be seen and understood as a series of snapshots of a situation that is often stripped of subtlety and dimension in media accounts. The resulting platform would allow Ukrainians to not only personally document the infringement of their rights and civil society development, but also to interact and collaborate with each other as creators of user-generated content.

Ukrayinski sheriffy / Ukrainian Sheriffs

Despite being the country with the largest police force in Europe, Ukraine, there is a lack of policemen in rural communities. The villagers of Stara Zburievka find a solution. They chose two local men to take care of the public order. Villagers give them power, a car, and shiny tokens and call them “sheriffs.” Sometimes wild and violent, at other times awkward and funny, the sheriffs’ actions, according to the village community, are always fair.

Roman Bondarchuk is a graduate of the Karpenko-Kary Theater, Film, and Television University (Yuri Illienko’s workshop). His graduation film Taxi Driver won the White Elephant prize from the Russian Film Critic Guild and the Russian Producers’ Grand Prix at the Kinoshok Open film festival for the CIS, Latvia, Lithuania, and Estonia, as well as the prize for Boldness and Poetics at the 4th KINOTEATR.DOC festival.

Wondering Photographer

France, Israel, Ukraine/ est. release 2016/ 52'

Wondering photographer is confronting on screen two generations of photographer - that of the director’s grandfather: one of Tel-Aviv and the Zionist movement first photographers; and that of the director’s, who goes after her forgotten pictures on journey to Israel, Palestine, and Ukraine. She revisits the people and places from her photographs, as she sees them today, a few decades later, through a different, critical perspective. This journey, started as a personal family story in Ukraine evolves into a larger quest for identity and an examination of the past dreams.

Tamara Erde is a French-Israeli filmmaker living and working in Paris. She was born in Tel-Aviv on 1982. She graduated from Bezalel Academy in Jerusalem, and later attended Le Fresnoy Film School in France. Tamara works in various media: documentary and fiction films, performance, and video installations. Her work has been presented in many film festivals.
