POCKET GUIDE TO UKRAINIAN DOCUMENTARY CINEMA

4TH EDITION

2017 2018

Open

Create a co-production, partnership or business.
Dear friends,

We’re happy to present the fourth edition of the Ukrainian Documentary Films Catalog. Our country and the world around us are changing rapidly, documentary films react to such changes the fastest. Moreover, true documentary films are able to strongly influence the society, since the art of documentary is capable of changing one’s worldview, understanding, and awareness of ourselves and the world around us. For the fourth time we collect in one pocketbook the Ukrainian documentaries that show current Ukraine to the world and interpret the world to Ukrainians through point of view of both up-and-coming filmmakers, as well as experienced and respected film professionals. We’re creating our own history and we’re eager to show it to the world.

Thus, I invite you to meet the new Ukrainian documentary cinema.

Program Director at Docudays UA

In recent years the film landscape of Ukraine started to change rapidly. Cinema in Ukraine is now one of the fastest growing industry sectors. New generations have come, new filmmakers’ names have surfaced. Today Ukrainian documentaries participate, and more often win, at many prestigious film festivals in various counties. With each year more and more films are being made in co-production. Our foreign colleagues are becoming convinced that Ukrainian producers are reliable partners, and Ukraine is blooming with interesting stories and characters.

In the fourth edition of the catalog we’re presenting the creative documentary films which have been released in the past two years or will be released soon, as well as the projects that are currently on different stages of production which we hope, will attract your audiences.
The festival is held annually in the last week of March in Kyiv. On completion, we traditionally present the best movies in the regions of Ukraine within the Travelling Festival.

Call for entries is opened every year from July 1 till December 10 @docudays.ua
TeplokomunEnergo is a municipal heating company in the city of Ivano-Frankivsk. Most of its workers are of same age as the company. Five days per week they have to deal with fountaining radiators, flooded basements and angry clients. Among other official duties, every Wednesday they come together to a recital room and sing in a TeplokomunEnergo union choir. This is a story about central heating system as a symbol of modern Ukraine. It explores how outdated social structures do not fit into modern economy, but, paradoxically, continue to function. Traces of working class culture and human warmth serve as a survival mechanism in the times of transition.

Viktor Hlushkov, a Soviet scientist and a founder of the Soviet cybernetics school in the 1960s. Glushkov supposed: there probably will be time when the complete transfer of human intelligence, feelings, and emotions into the digital medium will be possible – perpetuating a personality, gaining a human immortality. The thing that seemed Utopian in the 60s is a possible scenario today. What will it do to our world when we get the opportunity to save the personality on a digital medium? Does it mean that we can edit, copy and merge one personality with another?

Nowadays we deal with a huge data flow. In that flow “truth” and “deception” never have been so conditional.

Our world today goes through hectic times.
Lyosha, call sign Tantsor, used to be a scout; Sergey the Shakhta has been working in TV; Andrey the Potter used to be a jeweler. Just like thousands of other young fellows, without a fighting experience, they went to war as volunteers. “Company of Steel” is a movie about young guys who went through bombardments, deaths of friends, and betrayal to come back home alive, attempting to rebuild their lives from scratch. But they have changed just like the world around them. Their wounds and tribulations coincided in time with the withdrawals that Ukraine has been experiencing...
"If you feed the computer with deliberate lies, these lies will multiply and you’ll get a real mess. " These are the words of Viktor Hlushkov, a visionary mathematician who came up with a project that we now call ‘the Soviet Internet.’ When Hlushkov’s project was one step from being implemented, he was told by the top party officials that he had to wait. Instead of building a network for the circulation data, he was asked to create a pipeline network for the circulation of fossil fuels. This network, named Druzhba, operates to this day, transporting oil from Siberia to Europe through Ukraine. This is a story about massive misuse of technology created by the visionary mind.

The film investigates the kidnapping and alleged murder of a soldier in Donbas, in 2014. Together with his father, an elderly fisherman from Southern Ukraine, we follow the trail of his captors. Traveling from the calm Azov coastline to industrial conglomerates, from the furious mining region to the sleepless capital, we try to find the witnesses of the young soldier’s final hours, as well as those who could have seen his body. The film uses a wide range of video and audio material including news, voice recordings and interviews. Its complex narrative construction shows the long and winding path of a father who seeks justice for his son’s murderers.

THE FAIRY TALE ABOUT THE HOBBYHORSE

70 years old Anatoly, an oblate of the Cistercian Order is an artist-conceptualist and a dissident who fled Soviet Ukraine in the past. Once upon a time he made a vow that he will find something good, learn something new and create something with his own hands every day. Affected by the recent war in Ukraine, Anatoly, who for already 4 years brings humanitarian aid to the conflict area, has created a wooden Hobbyhorse, a symbol of volunteer. With the help of the Hobbyhorse Anatoly wants to speak to the world about the absurdity of the war and the fragility of the natural environment which is being damaged by human conflicts.

The words ‘Ukraine’ and ‘Hollywood’ sound like they belong to two very different, faraway galaxies. Even the act of putting them together sounds, in a way, like a coincidence or even a joke. And perhaps this is not just in the words, but in the scale of associations, or stereotypes, attached to those two subjects or, more precisely, concepts. This documentary film is dedicated to people who were born in Ukraine and who grew up in the United States in Ukrainian families. It is a tribute to those who changed not only the face of Hollywood, but influenced American art and culture.

Like in an ancient Greek novel, the young couple ends up being happy together, but only after getting through a lot of troubles. In this contemporary story, the difference is that, instead of shipwrecks, sail into slavery, and other adventures derived from the Olympian gods, two people in love have to face a complex mix of geopolitical, economic, and social issues. This is a personal story of Polina Moshenska, the director of the film. She has moved from Kyiv, Ukraine to Thessaloniki, Greece to reunite with her beloved. The film has a charm of non-powdered faces, uneven walk, family scenes, inner struggle, searches for necessary words, dreams and unpolished reality.

"Human with a Stool" is a stormy ocean of life for those who caught the wave. Leonid Kanter’s Student Game called With a Stool to the Ocean transformed into expeditions to the World Ocean. Years of traveling, 60 thousand kilometers and 30 countries. Indians from the Caribbean, Tibet monks and Latin American bandits, street performances, Amazonian landscapes, Gobi Desert, and Patagonia... Travelers carried stools to the oceans, which proved that any dream is feasible. The journey was replaced with the revolutionary Ukraine. Burning land was destroyed by the war, and burned the main hero’s soul. Without completing his dream film, the director ended his life by filming the last shot of his movie.

The film consists of a range of personal interviews, the narrative is built as a one man story. It is divided into two parts with working titles: veteran part and military part. In the ‘veteran part’ we hear a story unfolding chronologically: from the decision to go to the frontlines and up until present, when one has already returned to civilian life. In the military part everything is upside down: from returning home and deciding to go back fighting and until the very first moment they decided to go to war. It seems like a circle, as the story never really ends.

Ivan lives a simple life in an Ukrainian village. His main occupation seems feeding his animals and working his fields... until we realize that he is one of the great artists of a dying art form. One day, an art collector shows up on Ivan’s doorstep who has heard stories about an unique painter in a remote village. When the art collector leaves, he carries one of Ivan’s sculptures... Soon after, more art enthusiasts and journalists track Ivan down until they all stand in the middle of Ivan’s house, surprised and amazed by his work. Eventually, he and his works are invited to be showcased in Kyiv. The journey Ivan embarks on is bigger than a man traveling from a village into the big city. Arriving at the art gallery, he finds himself irritated by the excitement of people he never met before and who don’t even realize that the man strolling through the halls is actually the man responsible for all their enthusiasm.
This film is a road trip story of one visit to the frontline, where we’ll try to remember four years of such trips, full of new people and events. Every month Father Mykola Medynskyi loads his old off-roader with boxes, closes his church, says goodbye to his wife and two sons, and sets off to the war. Community in his native Sub Carpathian village is not very happy when the priest leaves the congregation. But there are soldiers waiting for him in the East of Ukraine. The trip to the front goes on, from one site to another, from one troop to another. We keep collecting memories and footage. And we see how the lead character transforms from a nameless rural priest into a public person. We see a miracle: one dedicated person changes the people and the world around him.

The beginning of the 1970s was the golden age of Ukrainian popular music. Hundreds of songs of unbelievable beauty, trendy sound, futuristic costumes – how comes all of these existed in the Soviet Union? Eastern Ukrainian vocal polyphony plus Carpathian torn rhythms imposed on American funk – that was the basis of the most influential musical scene of Ukraine. And yet today this scene is greatly underestimated.

"Peace for Nina" is a documentary portrait of a tiny woman who lost her loved ones in wars: first, her husband, and three years ago her elder son. Ihor Branovytsky was among the last Ukrainian servicemen defending Donetsk airport and was shot dead in front of other captured Ukrainian Army servicemen by the separatist leader, Russian citizen Arseniy Pavlov 'Motorola'. After losing her son, Nina found a new family: the parents, who, like her, were searching for their children, and the soldiers, who served in the same unit with Ihor Branovytsky. At the moment, the most important part of Nina's life is her own investigation into the circumstances of her son's death.
"Pearl of Absurd" is a documentary film and a cross-media platform about the city of Odesa, Ukraine. We set up a journey to the coast of the Black Sea to see the European city inside post-Soviet reality. Odesa is a city of myths, historical challenges, and my roots. Connection with which was lost in 1917 during the October Revolution. Since then, family stories were covered with forced silence. Old buildings are the only connection to previous generations. But the architectural heritage is the battlefield now. There is a fight between activists trying to preserve unique architecture and oligarchs rebuilding it to skyscrapers with shopping malls. Changes are inevitable. How will they look?

Resident of the village Kryvorivnya, Paraska Plytka-Horytsvit, who spent 10 years in Stalin's camps, came back home. She decided to take the camera and take pictures of the world around her. For 40 years she photographed people and the place where she lived. In 1998 Paraska died, and the negatives of her photos were considered lost for a long time. A year ago, a box with these negatives was found. After the restoration and scanning of the films, images of the past era appeared from nonexistence. Paraska's pictures opened a layer of history of the Hutsul village; they are filled with a breath of life, and sometimes existential stories, captured by the author's philosophical view. It is a story about the connection between the present and the past, reflected on the accidentally found photo negatives.

Valentin is an eccentric projectionist. For 44 years, he’s been working in one of the oldest movie theaters in Kyiv’s city center. In his projection booth, he drinks with war veterans, dances with the girls from the next door casting agency or cuts his friend’s hair. Every day at work seems another venture. The turmoil on Maidan square and the war remain behind the scenes, while the life on screen creates an alternative reality. It all comes to an abrupt end with a fire in the cinema, and Valentin is forced to retire. He looks after his dying mother, rushing to help the moment she whistles. With an average life expectancy for men in the Ukraine of 64 years, Valentin is aware that he has not much time left. Still, he fights desperately to find a new meaning in life in a rapidly changing country. #social issues #creator’s point of view
After his son’s death, a retired plumber Pyotr finds his mission in looking after homeless dogs that roam around Kyiv. Cocky macho Svyatogor is a lawyer and media personality, who finds his mission in killing Pyotr’s dogs. The two characters never meet in person, but there is an unseen war between them. The war for the definition of humanity. After Pyotr’s dog shelter perishes in flames, he needs surgery to keep his heart beating. Meanwhile, Svyatogor, despite several assassination attempts, registers his Doghunters Union NGO and continues his anti-dog bravado in social networks. Balancing between extremes of this often-absurd reality, Rabies is the story about healing wounds and rising from the ashes.

"Roses. Film-Cabaret" is a documentary cinéma vérité, following 7 actresses of freak cabaret Dakh Daughters Band on their path to the rapidly growing fame against the background of the revolution and an undeclared war against Ukraine. Life is a cabaret for the characters of the film, so ROSES is a film-cabaret, where music hardly stops, pace never slows, and acting becomes something genuinely sincere. But this is not a documentary portrait of a Dakh Daughters Band – nor is this another Maidan story. The story is about a change – which might ignite easily in the revolutionary fire, but is so much harder to follow through despair and despondency. In a way, "Roses" is a coming of age story – both for the group of young female artists, as well as for their re-born country, Ukraine – now once again trying to learn how to walk by her own.

This is a story of my mom and her two sisters. It is a film about friendship and disappointment, loneliness and old age, about how time changes people, transforming love into hatred, even towards your own sister. Life has changed them, old friends became strangers. How did it happen that in their retirement age they became lonely, bitter, forgotten, and useless? Should they work together to address these feelings, support each other, and jointly soothe their fears? They hurt each other, taking no notice of the fact that there may not be enough time for apologies. Will the sisters find a common understanding and will they be able to forgive each other? They come to a village, to the house of their childhood, and that’s where the most interesting part begins...

Only 12.5 hours separate peaceful Kyiv and Konstantynivka, a small industrial city in the East of the country, immediately after which the frontline begins. Here the war ceases to be something far from news releases. Exactly 12.5 hours the high-speed train number 126K forced in both directions, but time passes very fast along the road ‘from peace to war,’ and incredibly slow in reverse. And it is understandable because the beginning of the war takes a few hours, and restoration of peace lasts for many years. That is why this train is named by Ukrainians as the “Kyiv-War” train.

Both representatives of the non-governmental sector and film directors want to achieve change in society, each in their own way. By joining their experience, knowledge, and efforts, they are able to create films on urgent social topics, interesting for a wide audience. CIVIL PITCH: Civil Activism Films is a new platform for documentary filmmakers and civil rights activists launched by Docudays UA in 2018. Its aim is to facilitate the production of documentary films on the topics which are important and urgent, but not widely discussed in our societies.

6 civil rights activists and 6 film directors were selected out of 100 applications to work together. 4 film ideas got financing in March 2018. 4 short documentaries will be presented at Docudays UA in Kyiv in March 2019. Following this presentation, they will be ready to travel the world.
There are six of us in this kitchen – I’m standing behind the camera. Galya, Natasha, Ira, Lusya, and Sveta are participants of the program for psychological support for sex workers. How we solve crises, split up from husbands, give up alcohol and drugs, overcome domestic violence and go out of the marginal ghetto – all these things are more than just a kitchen talk.

Up to a hundred people per year receive refugee status in Ukraine. The film focuses on several stories of asylum seekers, each reveals a stage that a person is in. Aleksei is a Russian civil activist whose application for a status got rejected. Despite all the burdens of living with no documents, Alexei has participated in many actions against Russia’s aggression against Ukraine. The story of Nurkhan, a journalist, began when she covered the so-called Osh massacre in Kyrgyzstan. Now she and her three daughters are going to apply for refugee status in Ukraine. No Border activists support them in their daily struggle for legal status.

A 17-year-old journalist Serhii is studying the administrative code of Ukraine. The document and the journalistic text are his weapon in the fight against corruption in his native village. At one of the meetings of the local council, after Serhii convicted the council member in corruption, the deputy grabs Serhii by the neck and publicly chastises him. The central media of Ukraine write about it. For them Serhii is a hero, for part of the village he is a shame. The schoolboy is threatened, advised not to climb into the affairs of adults and throw a light-noise grenade into the yard of his house. The police are inactive. An advocate advises the guy to leave activism. But what will the student do?

A 17-year-old activist Serhii Chaharov fights against corruption in his small village near Kyiv. Local council members and other citizens of the village try to shut him up. One day a light-emitting grenade flashes in Serhii’s yard.
The right to the city is the right to the UFO!

Florian Yuriev is an architect, painter, composer, musician, and luthier. In order to preserve the work of his lifetime from destruction, Florian (now aged 89) is forced to master one more occupation: that of an urban activist. Between late 1950s and early 1980s, Florian has been designing and constructing an architectural project known as the Kyiv UFO. Today, as a result of a corrupt deal between the Ukrainian government and a private investor, the UFO building is about to be incorporated into a shopping mall that’s being constructed nearby. Florian Yuriev, together with a group of urban activists, is determined to not let this happen.

"The Cacophony of Donbas" is a film about the elite of the working class of USSR, the miners of Donbas. The Soviet propaganda had created such a false parallel reality that one day the situation had exploded and the war started. Life promised to be a symphony of work, joy and well-being, but it turned out to be deceit and manipulation. There are no illusions left. "The Symphomy of Donbas" has turned into "The Cacophony of Donbas".

This is an observational documentary focused on one of the biggest unfinished bridge projects in the world, Podilsky Bridge in the centre of Kyiv. Its construction started nearly 25 years ago, but was halted in the late 2000s due to lack of investment and overwhelming corruption. Currently, the locals have adapted the unfinished bridge to their own needs – from sports and leisure to risky parkour-style attempts at getting from one river bank to another. In the meantime, Kyiv’s mayor Vitaliy Klitschko is trying to figure out a way to complete the unfortunate project – with a little help from German politicians...

The Ukrainian Revolution (2013-2014) and the war with Russia in Donbas are close. Emotional cinema unfolds through the history of the First Company of Maidan, which defeated the inner enemy and advanced to the front fight with the external enemy. Immersion to the epicenter of hot events, frank artistic and civilian view of human relationships on the background of violent social upheaval. Immutable human stories, the collision of charismatic characters, challenges and solutions on the verge of life and death, the search for interaction, the first steps towards the formation of civil society unfold before the spectator. All this is summed up by an understanding of the journey passed and an optimistic view of the Ukrainian future. The film is woven as human memory, in which the past is filled with selective events of personal experiences. At the same time, it seeks to comprehend the latest Ukrainian time and events in the projection of the history of mankind.

A document-based investigation with elements of a detective story.

In the summer of 1969 Anatoly Kuznetsov, a successful Soviet writer, fled from the "communist paradise" to London. There he published the complete version of his main work Babi Yar heavily censored in the USSR. The book made a worldwide sensation translated to over 30 languages as the writer described Nazi crimes and Communist atrocities he witnessed as a boy and equated the scale of both. Now, almost half a century later, the writer's son follows in his father's footsteps. He finds the KGB files and people to whom his father has entrusted his secrets and comes to unexpected conclusions about his father's death at the age of nearly 50.

ГОГОЛЬ ДОК

'GogolDoc' is a metaphorical construction of the Tower of Babylon, which symbolizes the alliance of people for the sake of one global dream. In this case, a dream is to open and to arrange the 10th Gogolfest Festival of Art in Kyiv (Ukraine). Seemingly aimed at creation, the creative society is not always capable for dialogue with each other. 'GogolDoc' tells how an art is created, it shows the backstage and theatre's daily life. It also shows the crisis of creativity and raises the matters...

Every person takes a part at creation, the task of this film is to inspire people for self-realization in art.

In pre-revolutionary times Askania-Nova was a prospering central estate of baron von Falz-Fein. This German colonist had built railway, telegraph, airport, and by virtue of unique irrigation system had established arboretum park and wildlife sanctuary. It was a real oasis in the middle of wild steppe, where animals from all over the world were living without obstructions. Dust never settles around the estate, this ‘ark’ outlived two World Wars, Soviet period and ‘landed’ on the shore of contemporary Ukraine. Present and past are entangled in the reality of this world.

ENTICING, SUGARY, BOUNDLESS OR SONGS AND DANCES ABOUT DEATH

The film makes the connections between the ineffability of death and the mundanity of life. An old man is whistling and driving his car. ENTICING. A mother is worried about her children, wolves might eat them in the forest on the way to school. SUGARY. Two nearby villages are brutally fighting for the possession of a leather ball. The winners will bring the ball to the cemetery. BOUNDLESS. A journey that starts as an external observation of how people relate to death turns into a personal experience. The director of photography of this actual film dies before the end of shooting. OR. Italy. Georgia. Ukraine. USA. 16mm, 35mm, digital filming creates a mosaic structure from which spectators can draw their own conclusions and ask their own questions. SONGS AND DANCES ABOUT DEATH.

"No obvious signs" is the phrase which Ukrainian soldiers hear in hospitals, where they come with physiological traumas, needing help. But until their bodies have no injuries, not only doctors, but even society doesn’t notice their problems. What is left backstage from the heroic videos of our warriors in Ukraine? What do they have to face, one on one, in peaceful life, and where does the war stop?

“86” International Festival of Film and Urbanism
“86” is a vibrant interdisciplinary event held in Slavutych, Ukraine – a unique town near Chornobyl. The festival’s major focus is creative documentary films, particularly on the topics of utopia, urbanism, environment, and energetics. In 2016, the festival launched its first national documentary competition Palm of the North. Since 2015 “86” has been organizing a series of MyStreetFilmsUkraine film workshops and film competitions. The next edition of “86” will take place in May 2017.

Docudays UA International Human Rights Film Festival
Founded in 2003, Docudays UA is the biggest documentary film festival in Ukraine. The festival specializes in human rights and creative documentaries from the region and all over the world.

Molodist Kyiv International Film Festival
One of the top film festivals in Eastern Europe. Ukraine’s biggest and oldest film event, according to the International Federation of Film Producers Associations (FIAPF)

Odesa International Film Festival
Odesa IFF is one of the biggest audience film festivals in Eastern Europe. Since 2016 OIFF opened a new European documentary competition. The winner is awarded with the Golden Duke statuette and 2000 Euros.

KyivMusicFilm
KyivMusicFilm works with two kinds of releases: special events for alternative content (opera, ballet, concerts and art titles on screen) as well as with classical theatrical distributions of films about music and new culture.
